Dear Sir:

Fed by false information in the newspapers, the public every once in awhile is lead to think that the government is recalling certain types of money. This is absolutely erroneous - the only money the government withdraws from circulation are the worn out pieces and those designs that are over a certain age. 1923 pennies are just as common as any others. The papers throughout the country copied an error that has caused a lot of bother to everybody. Indian head pennies have largely disappeared from circulation, through a false rumor that they were being called in. There are countless millions of these still in existence but most of them are being hoarded away in the past few years by people who have taken them out of circulation. They will never be rare and only those in absolutely uncirculated condition will bring a premium.

Very truly yours,
